(Physical descriptions of new personnel are attached.)

3. Personnel were quartered in a barracks building in Camp Poellnricht which had previously been utilized for the UJKEVEL training. The married couple (agents) were billeted on the economy in the town of Hohenfels and were brought on to the reservation daily for participation in the training.

4. All missions listed in paragraph 2 of Reference were flown with the exception of Mission No. 5 which was cancelled due to weather conditions. The air support was considered excellent; all drops with the exception of one pass on the first day drop were made exactly on schedule and the one exception was the responsibility of the ground crew in that they were unable to ignite identifying flares due to malfunction of a number of flares. On subsequent exercises the ground crew found it necessary to ignite the flares with gasoline when igniters failed to work properly. On the exercise involving the mission which was cancelled due to weather, a drop was simulated by use of cargo and chute on hand.

5. According to @STAUDINGER, the mission of the UJLENTIL teams (UPHILL pseudo: NASHORN) has been changed to include the responsibility of passing VIP personnel (to include clandestine agents) from one team to another in a manner similar to the E & E lines of UJKEVEL. Field training was devoted to passage of personnel through cut-outs and neutral meetings in addition to the usual burials, reception of aerial cargoes, KSG W/T training and similar clandestine activity.

6. It was noted that two of the new agents (@LIST and @SANDNER) were comparatively young and did not correspond to the usual requirements of staybehind agents regarding stayability. @STAUDINGER stated that this was a deliberate move to provide at least one man per team who is physically fit for all activity. UPHILL is taking a calculated risk that they may be able to remain in place following outbreak of hostilities at least for a sufficient period to train replacements.

7. The morale and attitude of the agents were considered excellent. They entered into all phases of the training with enthusiasm and went to great lengths in preparing realistic and well camouflaged burials. During the evening exercises conducted under operational conditions, it was found that DZ's could be sanitized, parachutes buried, and cargoes transported to prepared sites within a period of 20 - 30 minutes.

8. Training films shown to the personnel consisted of copies of Army Confidential CIC film "Surveillance" and a portion of the KUBARK Secret film on "Caching" with German language dialogue dubbed in.
